Methodist Episcopal Church South/
Sudlersville Memorial Library
Sudlersville
Public

circa 1878

The Sudlersville Methodist Episcopal Church South formed as a result of a split with Dudley's Chapel in 1867. The congregation was organized in 1867-68 and the church, named Calvary, was constructed in 1868. In his history of the Peninsula Conference of the Methodist Church, E.C. Hallman notes that a second church was constructed in 1878, presumably replacing the earlier building. The existing church probably dates to 1878. Following unification, the Calvary congregation merged with the Asbury church and the Calvary church was converted into a library.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Sudlersville Memorial Library is located on the south side of Maryland Route 300 one-half block west of the center of town.

This frame temple-form building was constructed shortly after the Civil War as the Sudlersville Methodist Episcopal Church South. When the building was taken out of service as a church it was converted to a library.

The principal facade is the north gable wall, facing Route 300. The entrance is in the center, flanked by a single large stained glass window on each side. There is a rectangular transom over the door and a small, segmental arched window in the upper gable, both fitted with stained glass sash. There are three large stained glass windows on both the east and west facades. A small rectangular apse projects from the center of the south or rear gable. There is an arched stained glass window in the center of the south wall of the apse and tall narrow windows are centered on each side wall.

The building rests on a continuous brick foundation and is covered with asbestos shingle siding and an asphalt shingle roof. The eaves are finished with a box cornice that has a deep soffit below a complex crown mold. The cornice returns at the corners and is carried up the gable eaves.

The interior is quite plain, with plaster walls, a tile floor, and an acoustic tile ceiling. Brass plaques are mounted throughout the interior, honoring local citizens for aid in converting the building to a library.
